[A student looks at a campus map, walks around campus and scrolls through Canvas.]

[Peer Mentor Chloe speaks to camera on John Street.]

Do you remember your first semester at uni? Did you wish you had someone who could show you how everything works?

Well now, you can be that person for somebody else. How?

[Chloe quickly turns to her right.]

Become a Peer Mentor!

[Peer Mentor Mohammed speaks over footage of himself and Chloe talking with students on campus.]

Peer Mentors are volunteers who support new students settle in uni life. From showing them around campus, connecting them with the right services, or sharing your favourite coffee spot, there's a lot of ways you can help new students settle in.

[Chloe speaks to camera at the Indigenous Learning Circles.]

Since I've become a Peer Mentor, it's been really rewarding helping new students settle in to campus. It's also been a really great experience meeting new people that I wouldn't have met otherwise.

[Mohammed speaks to camera outside the Latelab.]

Whether it's helping students online or on campus, it is very rewarding knowing you're making a big difference in their experience at uni.

[Chloe speaks to camera. A screen recording of the Swinburne Volunteering Portal appears beside her.]

Register at Swinburne Volunteering today and select Peer Mentoring.

[Mohammed speaks to camera. A screen recording showing the programs available in the Volunteering Portal, including Peer Mentoring, appears beside him.]

And remember, you don't have to volunteer right away. You can choose when the time is right for you.

[Chloe and Mohammed stand together on John Street and wave to camera.]

See you on campus!
